JULY 4th, 2010

FOURTEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

THEME: The "Already" and "not Yet" of God's Reign the decades after World War II have seen many nations emerging from the mixed blessings of colonialism to self-determination. In such nations the urge for freedom was great. Many of their people risked their lives to oust the colonizers. And jubilant celebrations took place when finally the flag of dominance went down and their own national flag was raised. However, these nations quickly discovered that gaining freedom is one thing while building up an economically strong nation with a reasonable level of well-being for all is another one.

The Jews who returned from exile in Babylon had a similar experience. Reconstruction entailed much frustration. Where were the blessings (Shalom-peace-prosperity) promised them by God's holy men?

Christians who take a life of Christian witness seriously may also be frustrated. Time and again they read in their Bible that the reign of God (justice, love, peace) has been initiated in this world. But they look in vain for an abundance of it in their children! For their part, young people are critical of what the Church has failed to do and turn away from it. Even religious are afflicted with the same problem: after years of work in the inner city, a dedicated Sister may feel disappointed! Today's readings preach optimism nevertheless.
